RESEARCHES

- Evaluating Mood Interventions on the Sense of Hunger-A Crossover Design 02/2016-05/2016
- Graduation Thesis, Supervisor: Professor Aaron Rendahl,
 - Collected data through the Islands and focused on evaluating methods between the two factors
 - Analyzed data by a paired t-test and a fixed-effects linear model for response under a two-period two-treatment repeated-measures crossover design
 - Practiced the detailed procedure of the methods and compared the advantages with CRD
- Effect of Alcohol Consumption of Undergraduates on Their Short-term Memories 02/2016-05/2016
- Instructed by Professor Winston Doom, cooperative program with biology graduates
 - Completed the proposal including literature review, thorough research design and detailed implementation steps
 - Simulated comprehensive data through the Islands and finalized primary data screening, disposal and documentation
 - Processed and analyzed the data by statistical methods as sample t-test and a linear regression model with covariates via R and provided reasonable interpretation on the relations
- Effects of Distance and Thickness on Anti-bending Ability of Paper 12/2015
- Instructed by Professor John Corbett, independent program
 - Planned the experiment to test the ability by a randomized complete block design
 - Conducted the experimental design to study the influential factors of distance and thickness
 - Recorded and processed the data via R to analyze the relations between the factors and the ability
